The Maryland Fire and Rescue Institute (MFRI) of the University of Maryland is the State's comprehensive training and education system for emergency services. The Institute plans, researches, develop, and delivers quality programs to enhance the ability of emergency services providers to protect life, the environment, and property. MFRI is the State's fire and emergency service training agency.

The Institute has more than 70 years of experience in providing training to protect the citizens of Maryland. Over four hundred certified instructors serving as part-time faculty support more than fifty full-time faculty and staff members. MFRI programs rely on the knowledge and resources of the University of Maryland system to obtain service and assistance to serve you. The University of Maryland is a not-for-profit governmental agency of the State of Maryland.

The MFRI organization is comprised of five sections, working together to deliver services to a wide variety of customers. The Administrative Services Section is responsible for a variety of activities which provide a solid base of support to the overall mission of the Institute. The Field Operations Section is responsible for the delivery of field programs throughout regions of Maryland. The Institute Development Section is constantly providing new and revised teaching programs to reflect the current dynamics within the emergency services. The Logistical Support Section is responsible for the operation and maintenance of the training centers, equipment, vehicles, and props. The Special Programs Section provides consulting and training services to industry and government in safety, regulatory compliance, and emergency response.

It is the goal of all personnel at MFRI to improve upon the past and strive to be the best state emergency services training agency in the nation. The support of customers is extremely valuable and MFRI looks forward to working with you in the future.
